

Saturday 30th June 2018 • 9.45am - 2.30pm

St John's Cathedral

With The University of Queensland Node of the ARC Centre of Excellence for the History of the Emotions, St John's Cathedral is hosting an event to celebrate and explore the ways preachers have appealed to the emotions of their listeners across the ages.

After the reading of a sermon by the famous 17th Century preacher and poet John Donne, the day will feature a talk on sermons and emotions by The Reverend Dr Erica Longfellow, Chaplain and Dean of Divinity at New College Oxford and one of the editors of the new Oxford University Press edition of Donne's complete sermons.

“By the Word Preach'd”

Preaching, Emotion, and the Anglican Tradition

After a catered lunch for all attendees, the event will resume with a roundtable discussion among -

The Rev'd Dr Erica Longfellow

The Very Rev'd Dr Peter Catt
Dean of St John's Cathedral

The Right Rev'd Dr Jonathan Holland,
Principal of St Francis' Theological College

Dr Jennifer Clement, senior lecturer in English Literature at The University of Queensland

- in which the audience will be encouraged to participate, focusing on the ways in which religious language has appealed to the emotions in the past and continues to do so today.

We will engage with not only Donne's sermon but also with modern preaching and the language of the Book of Common Prayer.

This special occasion will appeal to those interested in preaching, emotions, and the language used by the Church to create and develop a community of worship in the Anglican tradition.
